Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood. If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Kidney trouble. Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

BY A MUSICAL CRITIC.

Musical Director of Chicago High Schools Gives a Musical-Literary Recital Last Evening.

The musical-literary recital given at the Welsh C. M. church on Tuesday evening by Prof. William ApMadoc of Chicago, may be termed an individual estroffed, including as it did almost all the features of that distinctly Welsh custom of gathering together of the musical and poetry loving people for the purpose of hearing masterly discussions and artistic renditions of the products of the bards which have been made famous.

ALL BUT THREE SIGN.

Bowen Street Residents Strongly in Favor of Electric Line.

All but three of the residents of Bowen street are eager to have the electric railway extension on that thoroughfare. Forty-four residents on the street in the blocks where the proposed tracks are to be laid wish to have the service past their doorways.

Appendix to the petition to the franchise of the Winnebago Traction company, containing the following amendments providing for the proposed extension: "Commencing at the intersection of Main and Waukoo streets, thence east on Waukoo to State street, thence east on State to Otter street, thence east on Otter street to Bay street, thence south on Bay street to Cease street, thence east on Cease to Josalla street, thence north on Josalla to Washington, thence east on Washington to Linda avenue, thence north on Linda avenue to Merritt street, thence north on Merritt to Bowen, thence north on Bowen to Irving street, thence west on Irving to Main street."

"Commencing on Bowen street at the intersection of Merritt, thence south on Bowen to Washington, thence west on Washington to State street, thence south on State to Waukoo."

A Busy Day on the Links.

There is a well known young man in Omaha, who is a past master in artistic swearing. In fact, his anger finds expression in such coherent streams of expletives that his reputation as a member of the Country club is based chiefly on this accomplishment.

But to get at the story of a famous bit of golf playing this loquacious young man did last week. His record is 137 or thereabouts and every time he makes the round of the course his score grows worse and he gets more vehement in giving expression to what is uppermost in his mind.

Last Wednesday before he started on the course one of the young man's friends jokingly remarked:

"Every time you swear put a clod or a chip or a piece of gravel in your pocket."

This was early in the afternoon. Just as the sun was sinking in the west a weary young man with bulging pockets staggered into the club house.

His friends had forgotten him and supposed he had gone home. As he entered the door he emptied a coat pocket and pebbles rolled all over the reception room floor.

"That's the plain damns," he exclaimed. From another pocket he dumped 100 pebbles which stood for a stronger member of the purely masculine vocabulary. Other pockets produced still more pebbles and clods which represented other bad words.

His friends tried to call a halt, but he persisted in littering up the floor, remarking:

"This ain't a circumstance. Just wait till you see the wagon load of oats the early and the teamster are bringing."

This story is told on the authority of friends of the artistically profane young man—Omaha Bee.

Did Bryan Elope?

There is a little romance in the life of our friend the enemy which does not seem to be generally known. A Chicago girl whispers it. Some years ago, when she was only a school girl and Mr. Bryan was only a congressman, she happened to sit next to him at dinner.

She was making a holiday visit to some friends in Washington. She was very young, very beautiful and very ignorant. He told her she did not know how to talk to congressmen, and he admitted he did not know how to talk to school girls.

But he had naturally kept on trying to put her at her ease. He said he was afraid school teachers would not approve of his principal experience with school girls. It occurred when he eloped with a school girl—his wife. I didn't know Mrs. Bryan had run away from school to be married. Did you?—Chicago Post.

Should Primary Tutition End Earlier?

A valuable addition to the current discussion on the length of school life has been made by Prof. Hansas of Harvard, in an address at Tabor academy. His thought on the subject leads him to the conclusion that the primary education of children should cease at the age of twelve or thirteen and that the succeeding years in school should be devoted to trailing along vocational lines. He insists upon a radical reduction of the time now devoted to the classics, arguing that a better knowledge of Greek and Roman civilization can be acquired through a reading in English of the history and institutions of those nations and times than by the study of the classics. Those suggested changes, the professor believes, would result in that union of general culture and practical knowledge which he thinks should be the aim of the education of the day.—New York Post.

SIXTEEN YEARS AGO.

Storm Period of Present Time Causes Residents to Recall Tornado That Visited Oshkosh July 5, 1885.

The storm period of the past three or four weeks has caused the memories of many of the old settlers to go back to the days of the earlier times when Oshkosh was visited by some calamities which were frightful in results. It was just sixteen years ago Monday, July 5, that this city was visited by the worst tornado ever experienced in its history. The storm struck the city in three distinct parts, one part sweeping down sixteenth street, one part traveling the course of the river and the third sweeping all before it along the length of New York avenue and spending the remainder of its force in the country adjacent to Oshkosh. The monetary damage done was estimated at $200,000 and some eighteen or twenty people were more or less injured, although none was fatally hurt. The storm struck the city about twenty minutes to eight o'clock in the evening and although it was of short duration after it was over the amount of wreckage and damage found to have been sustained was as great as that of several hours of fire. The most serious damage occurred at the corner of Sixteenth and Oregon streets. At that point a store belonging to Henry Hoffman was turned literally inside out. The building was totally destroyed and the goods scattered about the street. A barn was also razed and some of the stock which was stored in it was destroyed. The fair ground buildings were blown down and the damage at that place was estimated at $15,000. Other buildings in various parts of the city were damaged to a greater or less extent and the number of roofs which were lifted off buildings was large. Relief for the sufferers of a substantial nature was given immediately by the more fortunate residents and a concert was given for their benefit by Mrs. Abbie Carrington. The storm was of more than a local character and other cities in this part of the state were visited also.

and poetry not for the purpose of making a display of one's abilities but for the sake of good they may do to one's moral nature. It was not a Sunday school lecture either but was a dignified appeal to the auditors to try to learn what music and poetry can teach. Mr. ApMadoc said that the public singers of today are misled by their audiences; a performer will appear before the public and vocalize a song without the audience being able to distinguish a word of the song and will be encored because he has made good tones. The speaker declared that such a performer is not singing and the custom of singing has become such a habit that every performer is recalled whether he does good work or not. This he declared was not right and is an injustice to the good performer. Mr. ApMadoc declared that many untrained singers do the best work in public; they may lack in tone production but they make up for it in conception of the meaning of the composer and in clear enunciation. He declared that the same rules applies to readers and he advised that every person read aloud in private to ascertain the modulations of his voice and to locate that tone which possesses that undefinable but unmistakable quality of resonance. He said that resonance is necessary to the voice of every singer and speaker to make the performance acceptable to the critic. He gave a number of readings and sang several descriptive songs as illustrations of the power of the human voice to convey the idea of the composer to the listener. His renditions of such selections showed him to have a complete understanding of the matters upon which he spoke. The program included two Welsh songs the titles of which are translated as "A Gentle Maid" and "The Traitor's Song." He also sang in English, "We're a Hundred Pipers," "Gehlar's Grave," "The Sands of Dee" and "The Village Blacksmith." He recited two poems in English, "The Darby Ridge" and "The Race Against Death" and one in Welsh, "A Baby One Day Old." Miss Morgan sang a solo "Come Unto Me" and a duet with Mr. ApMadoc, "Would Ye Gang Awa, Jamie" both of which were well rendered. Miss Morgan accompanied Mr. ApMadoc and her work in that direction is worthy of especial favorable comment.
