TIRE OF PACKERS' CONTROL OF PRICES

Stockmen of West to Join in Big Enterprise Intended to Break Back of Big Meat Combine.

Western cattlemen are seeking practical methods of fighting the packers moters of the plan. Omaha, St. Jostfust, which has crushed out competition at all markets and set its own sas City all want the plant, it was prices to products and consumers, stated yesterday. One of the promotion to the former and high to the later of the consumers of the consumers of the consumers. tow to the former and high to the latter. Among the Nebraskans interested are Capt. C. E. Adams of Superior, Bartlett Richards of Ellsworth and A. W. Atkins of Sidney. They have combined with stockraisers from Missouri, Tayes, Kanses and other states and it Texas, Kansas and other states and it is expected a big independent pack-ing house or string of them will be built. The national live stock associa-tion is behind the scheme.

Articles of incorporation will place the capital stock of the company at

Of the total capitalization, 51 per on the total capitalization, of persent will be so disposed of that it will be held in escrow by the board of lifectors of the company. This will give the stockmen who interest themselves in the plan the assurance that the company will always be controlled by the stock interests. The rest of the stock will be sold to stockmen, if possible, though no purchaser will be barred. The division of the stock, as de-sided upon yesterday, was made to prevent any possibility of the packers crust gaining control of the new indesendent company. Two million dollars of the stock will be issued at first

The rest will be put out later.

The Independent Packing company The Independent Packing company proposes to erect at first but one plant. That will be built in the Missouri valuey. It will be in operation by the fall of next year, the promoters say. Later another plant will be built, probably in Texas. The plan to build independent stock yards for each new plant has been abandoned. The new company will put its packing houses where markets are already established and imploy its own buyers. This will give the independent company a chance to the independent company a chance to compete to a greater extent with the

to better the interests of the entire stock business which, in value, amounts to about 4½ billion dollars. They want competition in the buying of stock for slaughter. At present they say the packers are in a combine and it is impossible to secure more than one bid on their stock.

"The packers' trust is today paying from three to four dollars a hundred less than it was a year ago for stock on the hoof," said C. F. Martin, secretary of the National Live Stock asso-clation. "There has been no corresponding reduction in the price of fin-ished meats. The big packers are therefore beating the stockmen on the one end and the consumers on the other. We want to give them competi-tion. Then we can afford the stockman a higher price for his stock—at least what it is worth. We hope to bring about an advance of from ten to would necessarily have to give more bonus than towns that have packing tary of the National Live Stock association, the purpose is not so much to fight the packing houses now in exist-ence as to establish competition and make the packers pay a reasonable price for cattle. The men who raise caltle and hogs have seen the prices of stock full from seven to eight cents a pound to about five cents without any corresponding reduction in the price of the finished product. A pound of bacon costs more in their markets to-day than it did when a 300 pound hog-brought seven or even eight dollars more to the farmer than it does today So with the beef. The farmer gets less and the consumer pays more. There is a reason for it and the farmer and shipper have been investigating and discussing it. A Kansas man, who raises corn and buys cattle in the fall to feed the corn to, brought a load of steers to the Kansas City market yesterday. He figured what he could have sold his corn for and decided that he had lost just $15 a head on every animal he fed last winter and this summer. He found that meat was no cheaper and in some cases was higher than last more. The stockmen say this is an every day experience and argue that under these circumstances it is no wonder that they all conclude that if the packing house merger, talked of last year, was not completed according to the original plan, there was a merger in fact and effect just the same. The only difference, they say, was that the packers did not throw on the market some hundreds of millions of watered stock and continued to buy stock separately to keep down the popular feeling against the merger.

other way of getting it." sums up the explanation of the breeders and shippers for their plan of building their own packing house. "We want enough for our beef to encourage farmers to continue in business." C. F. Martin explained this morning. Then he went on to say that the proposed packing house would try to run its business for a reasonable profit and pay the farmer as much for his meat on the hoof as the market for the finished product would permit. The proposed venture is for the benefit of the farmer and shipper. The con-sumer does not seem to have much to do with either side of the contro-

The cattle men say that not only the packing houses are in one combination but the stock yards companies seem to be under their control. They do not, however, expect trouble from the stock yards companies when it comes to locating their packing house. They think the stock yards companies will give them fair treatment and perhaps give something of a bonus for the location of the plant.

Texas' Attitude.

The attitude of the Texas ranchmen in the matter is well reflected in the sentiments expressed by A. B. Bobertconclusion that a combination exists among the packing interests of the country, which is being used to the decided detriment of the producing element of this country. In no other manper can I solve the problem as to why good Texas range cattle are selling on the eastern markets today at from $4 to $5 per head less than one year ago, and northwestern steers are bringing from $12 to $20 less than the same class was during the high period referred to. To the man who considers the situa-tion in all of its bearings it must occur I do not believe that the packers are acting as a single firm in this matter but are pursuing the community of in fully effective in the stifling of compe-tition. When cattle are plentiful they agree on a low price and when they fail to show up in as large numbers as are desired a small raise is made in prices to stimulate the movement until there is again a sufficient supply to warrant a sharp decline. All of this comes out of the producer at a time when it costs more to produce in Texas than ever before. Grazing lands in this state are now higher and scarcer than ever before. Lease prices have been generally advanced, water facilities are expensive and much money has been invested in fine breeding stock. When the producer is compelled to sell his product at the ruinously low prices that have been prevailing all this season it hurts, and he naturally casts about for the cause, and in my judgement there is no occasion to look further than the influence that now dominates the cattle markets of the country.

"There is a remedy for the situation and that remedy is to be applied through the building of great independent packing houses. I do not mean packing houses formed and built under co-operative schemes, and plans similar to those in vogue when the farmers' alliance was in flower, for such methods are too chimerical. But I mean great packing houses founded on correct business principles and backed by ample capital. Even a superficial examination into the situation will convince anyone that great profits are made in the packing business. In will convince anyone that great profits are made in the packing, business. In the last year millions of unemployed capital were placed that can find no better investment than in the great packing industry, and it is surprising that the owners of these idle millions have not awakened to the existing opportunities and entered a field where nave not awakened to the existing op-portunities, and entered a field where there are so few to reap splendid re-turns on the capital invested.

I think there is no relief in sight for the producer as long as we only have three or four markets and those mar-kets are controlled or dominated by kets are controlled or dominated by three or four men. Of course these men have a perfect right to conduct their business in such a manner as to them seems best, but just at this time it appears that they are manifesting too much of a disposition to kill the goose that provides the golden egg. But after all, their action is only human. Opportunity is all that would be required for others to do likewise, for humanity or human nature is the same the world over. This brings us back to the point where it is evident that the best corrective methods are those which have a tendency to eliminate the opportu-nity, and this is just exactly what is needed in the present instance.

I hope that good will come of the conference on the independent packing house subject and that the leaders in nouse subject and that the leaders in the movement may be successful in their undertaking for the producing cattle element of the entire range country has reached the point where a change from the present methods is imperative. Frankly, I may state that I am a believer in congressive methods. I am a believer in co-operative meth-ods, such as seem to be the inspiration
