MAESTEG

with the parishes and villages of Cwmdy, Baidan, Bettws, Llangeinor, Llangynwyd, Nantfyllon and Spelter

From Slaters Commercial Directory, 1880.

Transcribed by Phil Mustoe

MAESTEG, with the hamlet of Cwmdy, is a thriving village in the parish of Llangynwyd, 9 miles (8 by rail) from Bridgend (its post town), situated on the river Llynvi, and in a neighbourhood abounding with mineral wealth. Here are situated the extensive works belonging to the Llynvi, Tondy and Ogmore Coal and Iron Company, who are also proprietors of between two and three thousand acres of coal and ironstone chiefly in this parish. The works consist of seven furnaces, four of which are blast, producing railway and merchant iron of every description. Cwmdy is governed by a Local Board of Health, established in 1858. The church at Maesteg is a chapel of ease, to the mother or parish church of Llangynwyd, and is a neat stone edifice, in the Gothic style of architecture. The services in it are conducted alternately in the Welsh and English languages. There are also several chapels for dissenters, and a National and other schools. A fair is held on May 3rd. Population of Cwmdy hamlet in 1851, 3,350; in 1861, 4,154, and in 1871, 5,836

LLANGYNWYD is an extensive parish, and village, about 8 miles from Bridgend (its post town), situated on the river Llynvi, and rich in mineral wealth. About a mile south-west of the village are the ruins of an old castle. The trustees of the Gnoll estate, Neath, are lords of the manor, and with G. R. M. Talbot, Esq., M.P., and other gentlemen, are chief landowners. The parish church is an old edifice, with tower and six bells, and is in good preservation; it is situated in the centre of the village. Woollen is manufactured in the parish to a small extent. The living is a vicarage, with the curacies of Maesteg and Baidan annexed, in the gift of J. D. Llewellyn, Esq. Near the church is a neat cemetery, two acres in extent. There are also chapels for Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans and Calvinistic Methodists. Acreage of parish, 2,524. Population in 1861, 4,815; in 1871, 8,944, which includes Cwmdy or Maesteg. Baidan is a chapelry in this parish.

BETTWS is a parish and village about 4 miles from Maesteg, and 5 from Bridgend (its post town). The Llynvi and Ogmore branch of the Great Western railway runs through the parish, which contains some extensive fields of coal. The Earl of Dunraven and others are the principal owners of the soil. The living is a perpetual curacy, annexed to Newcastle, Laleston and Tythegston, in the patronage of the Crown. There are also places of worship for dissenters. Area of the parish, 5,057 statute acres. Population in 1861, 371, and in 1871, 404.

LLANGEINOR is a parish about 7 miles from Bridgend. Here are the immense collieries of the Llynvi, Tondy and Ogmore Coal and Iron Co. Limited, formerly owned by Messrs. John Brogden and Sons, which extend through the whole parish. The principal owners of the soil are the Earl of Dunraven, James Brogden, Esq., and others. The living of the parish church is a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of C. R. M. Talbot, Esq. Population in 1871, 1,005. The other places are all in the Bridgend poorlaw union and county court district, hundred of Newcastle, diocese of Llandaff, and deanery of Gro Neath.

NANTYFYLLON is a thriving village about 1.5 miles from and in the same parish as Maesteg. Population included with the parish SPELTER is also a small villages 2.5 miles from and in the same parish as Maesteg. Woollen and flannel are manufactured to a small extent in the neighbourhood. Population included with the parish.
